Title: A Reliable and Efficient Data Transmission protocol Using Quantum Key Distribution

Summary: Objective of this thesis is to provide reliable key exchange and to transmit data efficiently. This thesis is based on presenting a way to transmit data within two parties with the ability to detect any eavesdropper. While traditional cryptosystems such as RSA, DES, AES etc. have become vulnerable Quantum Key Distribution (QKD) provides a platform for secure data transmission. The experiment is primarily based on two theorems, "Heisenberg uncertainty theorem" and "no-cloning theorem" both are related to QKD for secure data transmission.
